England, Scotland, and Wales, published, August, 1921, those of the French census for 1921, those of the Statistics Bureau of Germany published 1920, those of Japan for 1920, and those of such other nations as have issued official reports, as the Argentine Republic, the Australian Commonwealth and the Dominion of New Zealand, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Chile, Costa Rica, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, Yugoslavia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, Switzerland, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Uruguay, Venezuela, etc. Pronunciation and historical and political information concerning the regions and places recorded below are given in the main vocabulary of this Dictionary. The abbreviations used, with the exception of the symbols for indeterminate values, are explained in the main vocabulary (see INTRODUCTION). The population, in every case, is shown in thousands. When preceded by (1) the symbol indicates indeterminateness owing to the fact that the place referred to (1) was in the area of fighting during the World War, (2) is under reconstruction, (3) has been destroyed, and (4) is a place of which no reliable population has been published. The figures are those of the last census returns available.

FOREWORD

"A STANDARD HISTORY OF THE WORLD" is designed as a finger-post to the history of ancient and modern times. It affords speedy access to notable events and occurrences which have happened in all parts of the world on every day of the year from January 1st to December 31st. Thus, it is hoped that the information it affords may prove of value to students of history, to public men in all walks of life as well as to the general reader. Used intelligently, it will serve as a rich source of information in the preparation of a discourse, a sermon, or a public address, and, it is hoped, will therefore be found of great utility by all persons who have occasion to speak in public. The character of the contents may be briefly stated as biographical and historical in the widest sense. The events recorded relate to persons, places, and things. Events of the occurrence of which the exact date of the month in which they occurred is not known will be found arranged chronologically by the year at the end of each month. Much additional information may be found in the main vocabulary, in groups, as, for instance, under author, battle, era, feast, etc., or in the specific alphabetical place of the person or place under investigation. The system of Chronology followed is explained in the Introductory. See p. xix.

A Standard History of the World Told Day by Day.

For explanation of the System of Chronology followed, see Introductory.

Distinguishing Features

FUNK & WAGNALLS

New Standard Dictionary

A NEW CREATION: The enormous task of creating the FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY required several years. The work was built new from the ground up. The definitions of every word were examined in the light of modern knowledge and brought up to date. This labor was entrusted to a staff of editors and specialists which ranks second to none in the world of letters. Under their direction new, important, distinguishing features were introduced, and more than 100,000 new words were added to the vocabulary, which now consists of more than 450,000 vocabulary terms of all kinds—50,000 more living terms than are contained in any other dictionary.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS, the famous American author "I had never supposed that another dictionary could supplant the old Standard in my affections, wherein as a tried and useful companion it has had a warm place for many years. A careful scrutiny of the pages of your NEW Standard, however, has caused a wavering in my steadfast loyalty, and I am more than eager to be 'on with the new,' though I doubt if anybody could get very far 'off with the old.'"

MAARTEN MAARTENS, LL.D., etc., Law Lecturer at Utrecht University and Holland's foremost novelist, writes from Zonheuvel Castle, Doorn, Holland "Before so stupendous a work as a great Dictionary I feel my insignificance as in the presence of the ocean or the Alps. To me it is the most wondrous monument of the human mind. Far more than any single work of genius, far more than an encyclopedia, which may expand, while the Dictionary must condense, I can only admire. I can not attempt to estimate, still less to criticize. . . I realize, regretfully, humbly, that they who have studied your former edition know almost everything, though infinitely less than they who will study the new one."

COST MORE THAN $1,500,000: The former editions of the FUNK & WAGNALLS STANDARD DICTIONARY were produced at a total cost exceeding $1,000,000. It required more than $450,000 additional to put the first copy of the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY on the market, and an additional $50,000 to bring it up-to-date, thus bringing the total cost in excess of $1,500,000—more than has been invested in any other reference-work.

VASSAR COLLEGE, J. M. Taylor, President "For ten years I have been familiar with the old Standard and have valued it highly. The progress in plan and execution as revealed in this new edition is truly marvelous. The arrangement of the vast material leaves nothing to be desired."

REMARKABLY STRONG EDITORIAL STAFF: The Editorial staff of the FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY is a brilliant and scholarly one, chosen from the foremost representatives in every field of knowledge. A list of the 380 specialists of national and international reputation who cooperated in the making of the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY is given in the preliminary pages of the Dictionary, showing the position these specialists occupied on the Editorial Staff.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, New York City, Brander Matthews "What I especially appreciate in the NEW Standard Dictionary is the attitude of its editors toward the English language. They treat it as a living organism, with a dead past, which is to be recorded,—with a living present, which is to be reported,—and with a probable future, which is to be dimly foreseen."

SIR ROBERT ANDERSON, K.C.B., LL.D., Author, and lately head of the Criminal Investigation Department of Scotland Yard, London "The scheme of the work has both amazed and charmed me. It is altogether admirable. And having regard to the range and method of its contents, its title is wholly inadequate, for it is not only a Dictionary, but an Encyclopedia. And to the large class of writers with whom, as in my own case, bookshelf room is limited, this element will make it a specially welcome addition to many a library."

ACCURATE DEFINITIONS: Every possible care was taken to make the definitions absolutely clear and accurate. Each class of words was defined or passed upon by a representative of the science or art, or of the handicraft or party, to which the terms respectively belong. In this the editors were guided by this general thought: The people to whom a term belongs should have the right to say what they mean when they use that term. But if the term is used in a hostile or a different sense, this meaning has also been given.

LELAND STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., David Starr Jordan, President "The pages of the NEW Standard Dictionary are compact, full of information, the definitions are good and clear, and the constant introduction of technical words keeps the Dictionary in the line with the advancement of sciences."

DEFINING BY DEFINITIVE STATEMENT: The FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY gives a clear, simple, accurate definitive statement as the first element in the definition of a word, instead of defining first by synonym. Few words, if any, are exact synonyms of others, hence, to define by synonym alone is confusing. The plan that was adopted is to give first as clear a definitive statement as possible, and then, when necessary, to bring out the shades of meaning by adding apt synonyms.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Benjamin Ide Wheeler, President "I have used the old Standard most thankfully, and I can see that the NEW Standard is to take a long leap even ahead of that."

THE VOCABULARY—MORE THAN 450,000 WORDS AND PHRASES DEFINED: The aim of the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY is to include in the vocabulary all living and usable words in the English language. Some classes of words have passed out of use since the publication of the first edition of the STANDARD

NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY—FACTS AND DISTINGUISHING FEATURES.

DICTIONARY, these were weeded out of the vocabulary, and their places are taken by living words. More than 130,000 terms, in all, were added to the vocabulary of the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY—giving a total of more than 450,000 vocabulary terms of all kinds.

No boast is made of the number of words that the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY contains, however. Mere bulk in the vocabulary of a dictionary may be cheaply secured, and is worse than useless unless the terms are very carefully selected. The rules of inclusion and exclusion that governed the Editors in preparing the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY were formulated with great care and rigidly adhered to. They may be summed up in the one guiding principle: "Omit no word found in a living book—that is, in a book now read by any considerable number of people—nor any word whose meaning is likely to be sought for in an English dictionary." The problem that faced the Editors was not how to swell the vocabulary of the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY, but how to keep it within reasonable bounds.

Notwithstanding the rejection of useless obsolete words, the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY registers more than 50,000 more living terms than are to be found in any other English dictionary published.

ILLINOIS WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY, Bloomington, Ill., Theodore Kemp, President "Your NEW Standard Dictionary is such a triumph and is so superior to anything yet published that it should be accepted as the last word in dictionary-making, and at once the most scholarly and popular work of its kind."

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION, Washington, D. C. Walter Hough, Curator of Ethnology "The Standard Dictionary has always inspired confidence because its originators realized the resources of the English language. The NEW Standard brings these vast word-stores into greater subjection than any other dictionary."

JACK LONDON, Glen Ellen, Cal., the Noted Author "Being rather a veteran in the use of speech as a tool, I am convinced that your NEW Unabridged Standard Dictionary is the best kit of tools I possess in my library. I am immensely pleased with the 'One Vocabulary' arrangement."

SIR JAMES CRICHTON-BROWNE, M. D., LL. D., F. R. S., etc., London, Vice-President and Treasurer of the Royal Institution, etc. "For copiousness of material, modernity of information, richness of illustration and accuracy of definition the NEW Standard Dictionary seems to me to surpass all previous achievements in lexicography."

ONE VOCABULARY ORDER THROUGHOUT: The custom in lexicography heretofore has been to arrange a dictionary into several separate and distinct departments—the main vocabulary, an addenda or supplement to this vocabulary, a department of proper names, one of geographical names, another of noted names in fiction, and still another of Bible names, and a section of encyclopedic matter, etc., etc. In the arrangement of the FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY, every word is given its own place in the vocabulary, so that those who consult the book are required to look in only one place for the word that they seek. This feature has been hailed as a "triumph of lexicographical genius, the acme of ready reference and mechanical convenience."

JOHN LUTHER LONG, Philadelphia, Pa., Novelist "I am amazed not only at the technical completeness of the NEW Standard Dictionary, but at its excellence in every direction. The arrangement of the contents into one vocabulary attracts me especially, since I have so often to 'search further' for the true color of a word or phrase."

PAYSON SMITH, Maine, State Superintendent of Public Schools "The modifications in arrangement and method of treatment will make for the NEW Standard Dictionary a place of undisputed superiority among similar works. The one vocabulary arrangement will simplify enormously the task of reference."

COMMON MEANING GIVEN FIRST: The present meaning is given first of all in the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY. Following this are the rare, archaic, and obsolete meanings of the word, and last of all, the etymology or derivation of the word. This is the plan so successfully followed in the previous editions of the FUNK & WAGNALLS STANDARD DICTIONARY. It reverses the method followed by all other dictionaries, which is to give first the etymology of the word, then the rare and obsolete meaning or meanings, giving the modern meaning last. This meaning is just the one that the average man seeks.

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH DAKOTA, F. B. Gault, President "A remarkable anticipation of the needs of the scholar who is looking for a discriminating definition and the needs of the one desiring quick reference and a popular definition. The work will prove invaluable in our reference department."

U. S. PATENT OFFICE, Washington, D. C., A. G. Wilkinson, Dean of Examining Corps "For many years I have been daily using dictionaries in six different languages, and have found the Standard far in advance of all others in the perfection of dictionary-making. The new edition now contains information of varied sorts not to be found in any other dictionary with which I am familiar. It would be impossible to say too much in praise of the NEW Standard."

UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME, Ind., John Cavanaugh, President "When the old Standard Dictionary appeared, I felt that the work of dictionary-making could hardly go further. Every feature of the old Standard seemed so satisfactory both from the point of view of scholarship, convenience, and arrangement, that one was at a loss to suggest a possible improvement. The improvement has evidently come. As soon as attention is called to the one-vocabulary idea the great merit of the plan appears at once."

SIMPLIFIED SPELLINGS RECOGNIZED. The chief function of a dictionary is to record usage—to follow rather than to lead—yet, when custom and usage vary, it is important that a dictionary put itself on the progressive side.

Advanced steps have been taken toward simplified spelling whenever such steps are warranted by usage. When two ways of spelling the same word are used by recognized authorities, preference is given to the simpler form.

To the reformed spellings recommended by the Simplified Spelling Board vocabulary place is given in the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY, but the definitions are recorded under the usual forms.

In recording the new phonetic forms of words, the Editors introduce no theories of their own, but give only just recognition to the forms recommended by the most eminent philologists of the United States and Great Britain.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, New York City: "The first edition of the Standard Dictionary proved to be a notable event because it led the march to so many improvements in our heavily handicapped English language, many of which are to-day in general use and others are sure to follow. The present edition continues this march forward with rare courage and, what is important likewise, with rare discretion."

REVISED SCIENTIFIC ALPHABET PREFERRED FOR PRONUNCIATION: Two keys are used in respelling for pronunciation. Each word is respelled (1) in the Revised Scientific (or N. E. A.) Alphabet, (2) in the text-book key. Two keys are merely temporarily necessary during the period of transition from the old key to the new one, especially since a large number of school-books contain the text-book markings.

The Revised Scientific Alphabet is a simple, logical key in which the aim is to have one sign for each sound, one sound for each sign. Only one diacritical mark is used—the macron or mark of length. In the principal other system in use there are more than sixty intricate symbols and diacritics to represent the forty-two elementary sounds in the English language.

At their annual convention in December, 1911, the MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION and the AMERICAN DIALECTIC SOCIETY gave the stamp of their official approval to the Revised Scientific Alphabet. Inasmuch as these societies, together with the AMERICAN PHILOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION, include practically all the linguistic experts in the United States and Canada, this is the strongest possible indorsement that the Alphabet could have.

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT, Burlington, Vt., Guy Potter Benton, President "The copious vocabulary of the NEW Standard Dictionary, its encyclopedic indices, the arrangement of the entire contents in one alphabetical order from cover to cover and the two keys to indicate pronunciation will give us the most complete lexicon of the English language thus far published."

UNIVERSITY OF DENVER, Colo., Henry A. Buchtel, Chancellor "The new departures in the Funk & Wagnalls NEW Standard Dictionary constitute a distinct advance over other dictionaries. The one vocabulary throughout will be a notable addition to the value of the book. The two keys for pronunciation will be much appreciated."

SUPERB ILLUSTRATIONS THAT DEFINE: The value of the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY has been vastly increased by a magnificent series of full-page plates in color and black and white as well as text illustrations. Several of the color-plates were designed by TIFFANY COMPANY and the color-printing was done by the TABER-FRANG ART COMPANY, the AMERICAN LITHOGRAPHIC COMPANY, and others of the large lithographers of America.

There are, in addition, many other fascinating and instructive pages on Aeronautics, Aviation, the Arterial System, Bacteria, Birds, Butterflies and Moths, Dogs, Fire-fighting Appliances, Flowers, Leaves and Plants, Motor-Vehicles, Wireless Telephony and Telegraphy, War-ships, etc., etc.

NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY—FACTS AND DISTINGUISHING FEATURES.

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA, S. C. Mitchell, Dean "The Funk & Wagnalls NEW Standard Dictionary is a model of excellence, thoroughly revised, up-to-date, and abounding in illustrations of the scholarly text. I congratulate you heartily upon this signal work. The fulness of treatment is marvelous."

NORTH DAKOTA AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, J. H. Worst, President "I consider the plan of the Funk & Wagnalls NEW Standard Dictionary superior to any other yet published. The definitions are very clear, and the illustrations bear evidence of remarkable skill."

BUREAU OF EDUCATION, Richmond, Va., J. D. Eggleston, Department of the Interior "The NEW Standard Dictionary will be a necessary part of the standard equipment of an office, whether for student, writer, or business man."

ETYMOLOGIES ACCURATE AND CONCISE: While due weight has been given to objections urged against the insertion of extended etymologies in popular dictionaries, this branch of lexicography has been given the most careful attention, with reference to both form and fulness, under the supervision of the late FRANCIS A. MARCH, Ph.D., Professor of English Literature at Lafayette College.

WALLACE IRWIN, New York City, Author "Your NEW Standard Dictionary, in addition to being the last word in dictionary-making, is compiled on a basis of common sense, permitting the reader to put his finger on the needle of truth without searching through a bag stack of useless material."

COMPOUNDING OF WORDS REDUCED TO A SYSTEM: The compounding of words was placed in the hands of an expert in this field and has been reduced to a system. Definite rules were formulated by which it can be determined whether two words closely connected should be written with or without a hyphen, or whether they should be written as one solid word. The thoughtful consideration of scholars is invited to this special feature of the Dictionary. In addition to this the division of words into syllables received careful consideration from the same expert and a set of simple rules were evolved that serve as guides to this perplexing subject.

CHARLES F. AKED, D.D., LL.D., San Francisco, Cal., Eminent Divine "I have used the old Standard Dictionary ever since I came to America and I have not once found it fail. Yet the NEW Standard surpasses it in every point. It is entirely reliable, marvelously convenient, and complete beyond all belief. The NEW Standard adds immensely to the intellectual wealth of the world. To study it is a means of grace, to know it is a liberal education."

THE GERMAN DOUBLE HYPHEN: To avoid the confusion that often arises, especially in a dictionary, from using the same form of hyphen for the division of syllables as for the joining of the parts of compound words, the German double hyphen was adopted for hyphenated compounds.

HUDSON MAXIM, Landing, N. J. "Your NEW Standard Dictionary—both compendium and encyclopaedia of to-date knowledge—is verily the last word in dictionaries. It is altogether the most valuable single reference-library that the united genius and learning of man has yet produced."

SYNONYMS: An increased vocabulary of synonyms, and an enlarged and suggestive treatment of them, has been introduced into the FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY. This new dictionary does not give merely a list of synonyms. It brings out the finer, nicer distinctions of words. The method followed is to take in each group some one word whose meaning is well known or capable of being succinctly stated, and to compare similar and dissimilar words with this central term, thus avoiding the vagueness that attends easy sliding from synonym to synonym, while preserving the unity of the group. More than 23,500 synonymous terms are discussed in this manner.

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE, Oakland, Cal., Brother Fabricion, President "A critical examination of the specimen pages of the NEW Standard Dictionary convinces me that your forthcoming work will represent the nearest approach to the ideal book of reference destined to appear for many years. What especially impress me are the unity of vocabulary order, the thoroughness and precision of the treatment of synonyms, and the scholarly discrimination manifested in the definitions of technical terms."

ANTONYMS, or the opposite meanings of words, are given in the NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY. ("Sweet": antonym, "sour.") They are not to be found in any other dictionary. Antonyms have the advantage of definition by contrast, and are often helpful to the clear and vigorous expression of contrasted and conflicting ideas which it is desired to state antithetically. Nearly 5,000 of these are given.

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, Washington, D. C., G. B. Brackett, Pomologist, Bureau of Plant Industry "We are apt to think that perfection has been reached in modern dictionaries, but I am free to say that you have surpassed all former publications of this class in the NEW Standard Dictionary. It is more than a dictionary, it is a wonderful mine of knowledge."

CAPITALIZATION OF PROPER NAMES ONLY: In the vocabulary, only proper names, or proper terms derived from them, are printed with initial capital letters, thus enabling any one to determine at a glance whether a word is to be written with an initial capital or a small letter.

ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE, author, editor "One must have the Funk & Wagnalls NEW Standard Dictionary, or fall behind the English language."

ILLUSTRATIVE QUOTATIONS: These not only illustrate the meanings of the words, but possess intrinsic value in themselves. To realize this ideal, more than four hundred professional readers have searched the works of the standard English authors.

To make these quotations of real value, the author's spellings to the very letter are used, and not the spellings preferred by the editors, as is the common practice of other dictionaries. Each quotation is accurately "located"—that is, the name of the author and the title of the work, the volume, chapter, page, and the name of the publisher and date of publication are given. More than 30,000 quotations are included. This is an exclusive feature with the FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY.

The quotations were selected in large proportion from the more modern standard English and American authors. Never was the language so well developed as it is now, and it is assuredly more important for the people to know the precise meanings that living writers of standard English are giving to words than to know just what meanings were given to these words by the writers of a century ago. True, the older meanings are important, and these receive their relative share of space and emphasis.

Quotations from the periodical press are not infrequently given—first, because the newspaper or the magazine is near the people and indicates the common or current usage, and, second, because some of the best writing in the English language to-day is to be found in the better-class journals.

GEORGE BRANDES, LL.D., the distinguished Swedish author "Generally the rarest two sorts of dictionaries. The vocabularies, and the dictionaries that deal only with real and historic matter. The NEW Standard unites these two species in one unique work. So far as I know the qualities of the enterprise have never been united in so great a style and with such expenditure."

PURDUE UNIVERSITY, Ind., W. E. Stone, President "The Funk & Wagnalls NEW Standard Dictionary will be indispensable to those who wish to make use of the latest authority in definition, pronunciation, and spelling."

WORD-FINDING LISTS: By a system of grouping applied to the names of fruits, coins, weights, measures, stars, trades, etc., the facts concerning this class of words are given with very great fulness. For example, under "African" are given the names of the principal African tribes, under "constellation" are given the names of all the constellations, under "apple" and the other fruits are given the names of the different varieties, often running into hundreds, under "architecture" a list of all architectural terms is given. This feature is exclusive with the FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY. For the first time in any dictionary lists of Americanisms and Britishisms are given under these words, and each of these is also defined in alphabetical place.

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY, West Point, New York, Edward S. Holden, Librarian "There is no single book of reference so useful and so accurate as the Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary."

DEPARTMENT OF DISPUTED PRONUNCIATIONS: In many cases the leading dictionaries and the foremost scholars differ as to the pronunciation of a word. In every case of disputed pronunciation the word was referred to an International Committee of twenty-five leading Educators and Specialists from different parts of the English-speaking world. By a simple system the forms preferred by each member of this Committee, and those preferred by the leading dictionaries, are given. This plan furnishes a most comprehensive, intelligent, and authoritative presentation—in fact, a consensus of the best judgment of the correct pronunciations. It covers all general or common words regarding the pronunciation of which modern authorities differ. This again is a feature that is exclusive with the FUNK & WAGNALLS NEW STANDARD DICTIONARY.
